

LIBRARY NEWS

November 2020

Welcome to the 4th edition of the Gawler Library's Shelf Talk newsletter! We're so pleased you've grabbed yourself a copy and hope you enjoy all the good stuff we've packed inside for you to read.

You may be familiar with some of the regular staff here at the Gawler Libraries, but you may not know them all. Our library staff work across both our library locations. We'd like to introduce our fantastic staff to our lovely community and library users so you can get to know us better.

Meet Allen... He has been working for the Gawler Libraries since July 2019. He has earned a Diploma in Family History, Advanced Diploma in Library & Information Services and is currently studying towards his BA (hons) in History, minoring in Australian History. He was the 2017 Emerging SA Historian of the Year awarded by the History Council of SA and serves on the committee of the Gawler History Team Inc. He enjoys helping people while they visit the library and is not at all as scary as he may seem. Say hello next time you're visiting our library!

We are pleased that we can start hosting events and we're looking forward to more events and workshops occurring in the near future as opportunities arise and conditions remain safe. Please watch this space!

What do you think of our 'Shelf Talk' Newsletter? What are your favourite pages? Are you looking out for it at the beginning of each month now? Using your smartphone QR scanner you can let us know your thoughts on this as well as our other library activities. Check out the Tech Tips page further into this issue for more information.

EVENING READS

Are you dreaming of a weekend away? A new title called just that is now available on our shelves here at the Gawler Libraries. A brilliant suspenseful mystery for those readers who love a good crime story.

"Orla and Kate have been best friends forever. Together they've faced it all – be it Orla's struggles as a new mother or Kate's messy divorce. And whatever else happens in their lives, they can always look forward to their annual weekend away. This year, they're off to Lisbon: the perfect flat, the perfect view, the perfect itinerary. And what better way to kick things off in style than with the perfect night out? But when Orla wakes up the next morning, Kate is gone. Brushed off by the police and with only a fuzzy memory of the night's events, Orla is her friend's only hope. As she frantically retraces their steps, Orla makes a series of shattering discoveries that threaten everything she holds dear. Because while Lisbon holds the secret of what happened that night, the truth may lie closer to home..."

WEEKLY WIND DOWN

Want to escape from the week? Are you keen on Wilbur Smith adventures? The author has put together a series of podcasts interviewing real life adventurers telling their stories of survival, adventure, hope and resilience. Called The Power of Adventure, in his own words he describes this series...

"It's been said that having an adventure is the only way to learn something about yourself and the world at the same time. If that is not available to you right now with the global pandemic situation or for many other reasons, then reading or listening to adventure stories may broaden your horizons in unexpected thrilling ways. I am very pleased to bring to you a new podcast series that reinforces those principles by exploring the essence of adventure. I am sure my new heroes, the stars of the podcast, will invigorate you to place adventure in the heart of your imagination. I can't think of a better collective of daredevils that capture the fierce determination of Saffron Courtney or the adventurous spirit of Penrod Ballantyne than the six people below. I hope you find their stories as inspiring as I do."

TALK ABOUT TOWN...

This is a new addition for our newsletter. An opportunity for us to highlight our local creators. For November we have a piece written by local author, Judy Gillett-Ferguson, a retired educator who spent many years advising parents and teachers how to foster a love of reading and reading skills in children.

Learning to Read - The Gift of a Lifetime. Being able to read is not a natural process for human beings as learning to speak is. We learn to speak instinctively if we are spoken to, but reading has to be learned. For some people this is more difficult than for others - like those who have some form of dyslexia. As competent readers, what we take for granted when we read are things such as: read only the black patterns on the page not the white ones in between, read from the top of the page and from left to right (not the case in languages like Arabic, Hebrew and Chinese who read from right to left.) We open the book with its opening on the right hand side not the left (as in some other languages). All these processes have to be learned and aren't at all instinctive. Some of the most precious gifts we can give children are the skills and delight in reading. This begins from birth when we talk, sing, recite nursery rhymes, tell oral stories and even read to infants and very young children. They soon learn that stories, poems and rhymes and being read to from books are associated with love, comfort, fun and excitement, and most importantly, with those nearest and most important to them.

Being read to often and in a relaxed environment instils in young children a recognition of books as a source of pleasure and later, information. They progress from picture books and those with rhyming texts they can learn by heart - Dr Seuss books are a classic example of these! This mimicking and repetition are important pre-reading skills. Coming into a library is an Aladdin's Cave for children where they can choose books that appeal to them and where often wonderful reading and story telling experiences are provided by library staff. At home, the Public Library, at Child Care, pre-school and at school, children benefit from these pre-reading experiences and a foundation for a love of reading has been laid for a lifetime! What a gift to give the children you love!

TECH TIPS

Have you ever seen a QR Code (abbreviated from Quick Response code)? They look like a strange square collection of pixels. They are very versatile little digital tools. Once programmed they can be used to show the scanner a website, play a song or video, display instructive text or even map directions.

To read a QR code you need a smartphone with access to the internet and an app especially for scanning QR codes. They can usually be found on your devices app store for free. On the right is a live QR code we've created to give you access to a survey to give your thoughts on our programming and events held in the library. We'd love your feedback!

What events do you want to see happen in the Gawler Library in 2021? Scan the QR code featured below to answer our survey!

GAWLER HERITAGE COLLECTION

On display in the Reading Room

This aptly named calico dress, 'The Bunyip Dress' is currently on display in the Reading Room at the Gawler Civic Centre. Entry is gained through the Gawler Public Library during Library hours.

The Bunyip Newspaper that is printed on the dress dates from Friday, August 18, 1916. Our research has failed to uncover when the dress was made, why, or who wore it. It is possible that it was created by the Barnet family, to aid one of Gawler's many fundraising efforts for the Great War (WWI). The Barnets owned and operated the newspaper at the time and the family were extensively involved in all aspects of the community. Many thanks to Kay Boon for saving this dress from a 'pile of old rags' in the 1980's. Have you any hints or links to this dress? We would love to hear from you.

Why 'Fire the Cannon?'

The cannon on display as part of the Heritage Gallery's latest exhibition is the cannon that was fired on May 30th, 1870. It was fired to mark the arrival of the South Australian Governor Fergusson into Gawler and to celebrate the laying of the Foundation Stone of the Gawler Institute Building that occurred that same day. Dr William Home Popham owned the cannon at that time. He used the cannon from his home, Craiglea (directly behind the Gawler Civic Centre) to mark important events such as the arrival of the Duke of Edinburgh in 1867, the sixtieth anniversary of the reign of Queen Victoria in 1897 and when it was feared that the Russians were invading in 1888.

Dr Popham acquired the cannon prior to his arrival in Gawler in 1858 and it is believed to be one of the four 88 inch cannons that came to South Australia on HMS Buffalo in 1836. Come on in to the Heritage Gallery and see the cannon for yourself.

Kadlitiya Yarning Circles - In recent times, the #BlackLivesMatter movement has been amplified across to our shores. This resonates strongly with our First Nations people as Australia continues to have the highest rates of Aboriginal deaths in custody in the world. This has created difficult conversations about racism in all its forms, including white privilege and fragility, and the role we can all play in achieving systemic change. The Kadlitiya Yarning Circles are a local approach to keeping these important conversations going.

Arts on the Plains Art Exhibition - Showcasing 3 Art Exhibitions at the Gawler Civic Centre across the month of November (Monday-Friday, 9am-5pm). Arts in the Right Place, presented by the Gawler Community Gallery and Gawler Art Society, has over 30 entries of mixed media works and will be displayed in the Institute Hall on First Floor. Inspired by Plonk - a group of 3 local textile artists - will exhibit their textile works in the Niina Marni Café space on Ground Floor. Here's Looking At You is an exhibition by Tineta Ellis, showcasing 70 oil pastels and acrylics within the First Floor's Business Innovation Hub.

OFF THE SHELF

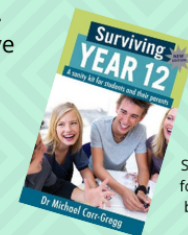

Exams have begun for our Year 12s and will continue until November 18th. If you know of a Year 12 who is looking for a few last minute hints and tips, the following titles could be of interest. Either drop in and borrow a book, or download an eBook or eAudiobook with your library card with the Libby app.

Exam Tips

- Have a good nights sleep, this is pivotal; you'll be at the peak of your mental performance.
- Have an early night and don't get up very early, as this will just make you more tired.
- Don't rely on last minute revision.
- It's okay to revise a couple of things the night before the exam, but don't get into a panic about the things you don't know.
- Convince yourself of how much you do know.
- Organise stationary - make sure you have all the equipment you need for the exam, with back-ups. Then pack your bag.
- Does your calculator need batteries? Do you have spares?
- Plan travel arrangements. Allow for traffic. Short of floods tidal waves and earthquakes there is no excuse for turning up late for an exam.
- Relax and be positive - your attitudes towards exams play a large part in determining how well you do.
- Double and triple check that you have read the exam timetable correctly.

CLEVER KIDS - SCIENTISTS

Whether it is stinky or nice, smells are all made possible because of your nose sending signals to the brain. The sense of smell, comes from your olfactory system. Chemical molecules (smells) enter the nose and dissolve within a membrane called the olfactory epithelium. In humans, the olfactory epithelium is located about 7 cm inside the nose.

Identifying smells is your brain's way of telling you about your environment. Have you ever smelled your toast burning? In an instant, your brain interpreted the smell as a problem and you knew to check on your toast.

Here's an experiment to test your family's olfactory senses.

1. Find 5 - 10 household items such as:

- Onion
- lemon
- vanilla
- vinegar
- gum leaves / eucalyptus
- burnt wood or toast
- Lavender or flowers
- laundry powder

2. Wrap them up in a small piece of paper and poke some holes in the paper with a toothpick so that you can smell them.

3. Ask your family or friends to see if they can guess which each smell is. Were some smells edible and others not? Did some smell dangerous or comforting? Were some familiar and others unusual?

Artwork: Shape of Land by Tyrown Waigana

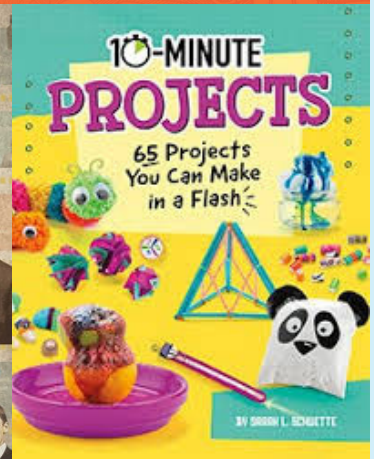

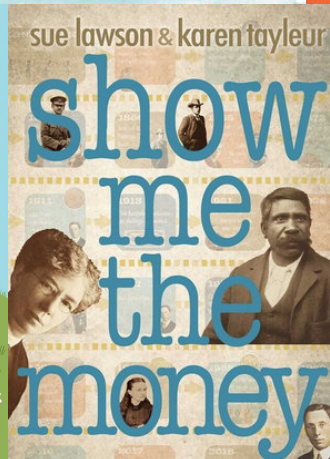

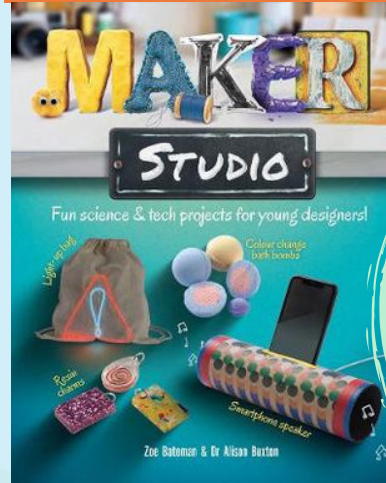

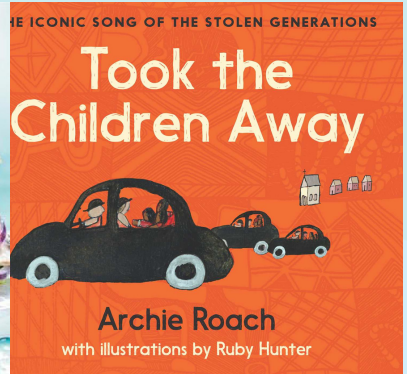

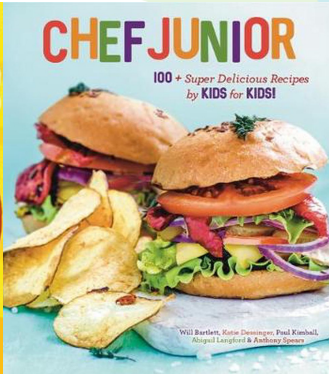

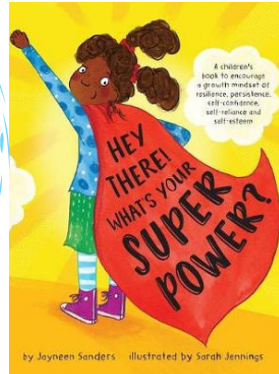

The Rainbow Serpent came out of the Dreamtime to create this land. It is represented by the snake and it forms the shape of Australia, which symbolises how it created our lands. The colour from the Rainbow Serpent is reflected on to the figure to display our connection to the Rainbow Serpent, thus our connection to country. The overlapping colours on the outside is the Dreamtime. The figure inside the shape of Australia is a representation of Indigenous Australians showing that this country - since the dawn of time - always was, and always will be Aboriginal land.
